The first of these is the fact that the system of the world is not a simple one but a complex one. It is a system of many parts, each of which is connected to the others in a way that makes the whole system a single, unified whole.
 This is the first of the three principles of the system of the world.
 The second principle is that the system of the world is not a static one but a dynamic one. It is a system that is constantly changing and evolving. This is the second principle of the system of the world.
 The third principle is that the system of the world is not a closed one but an open one. It is a system that is constantly interacting with the outside world. This is the third principle of the system of the world.

Handwritten text in a cursive script, likely a historical document or letter. The text is written in a dark ink on aged, slightly discolored paper. It consists of several lines of text, with some lines starting with a small circular mark or dot. The script is dense and flowing, characteristic of historical cursive handwriting. The text appears to be a formal or semi-formal communication, possibly a letter or a report. The lines are closely spaced, and the overall layout is organized. The paper shows signs of age, including some staining and a slightly uneven texture. The handwriting is consistent throughout the document, suggesting it was written by a single person. The text is written in a language that appears to be a historical form of a European language, possibly Italian or Spanish, given the style of the script and the use of certain characters. The document is a single page, and the text covers most of the surface area. The margins are relatively narrow, and the text is aligned to the left. There are no visible dates or signatures at the end of the document. The overall impression is one of a well-preserved historical artifact.
